Ty Wang
Co-Founder and CEO
Angle Health

Ty Wang is the Co-Founder and Chief Executive Officer of Angle Health, an AI-enabled, member- and patient-centric healthcare company democratizing access to modern healthcare services through its custom, full-service health plans for employers.

Ty and his co-founder, Anirban Gangopadhyay, both grew up in immigrant families, where access to healthcare and healthcare literacy were significant challenges. They founded Angle Health to address these issues, focusing on providing transparency and simplicity in the healthcare system. Today, Angle Health partners with thousands of brokers and employers across the U.S., primarily serving small- and medium-sized businesses to offer affordable, high-quality healthcare coverage to tens of thousands of Americans.

Prior to founding Angle Health, Ty led major deployments at Palantir Technologies and spent several years in public service with the U.S. government across various foreign and domestic posts. He graduated from Washington University in St. Louis with degrees in electrical engineering and systems engineering. Ty has been published in various academic journals, including Technology in Cancer Research & Treatment and The Journal of Nuclear Medicine.
